AIDING GERMANY FROM BANKRUPTCY THREAT

Heat Spell of Northwest is Apparently Broken

COOLING THUNDER SHOWERS REFRESH DURING NIGHT

DEATH TOLL OF HEAT COMPARABLE WITH A MAJOR CATASTROPHE

POWER LINES IN MANY SECTIONS OF NORTHWEST AFFECTED BY STORM

St. Paul, Minn., June 20.—(U.P.)—Leaving a death toll comparable with a major catastrophe, the northwest's heat spell today apparently was broken.

Cooling thunder showers last night and cloudiness today kept temperatures below the record high for the year which were established during the past four days.

At least 35 deaths were attributable in the northwest to the heat which reached 109 in Canada. Eight persons were overcome with heat prostration and died. Two were killed in North Dakota in an automobile accident caused when the heat blew out their tires. Six were killed in floods in Alberta. The rest of the deaths were from drownings of those seeking relief from the heat.

The storm which brought the cooler weather claimed the life of James Kierce, 19, Minneapolis, who was bathing at Lake Calhoun when overcome by the waves. Life guards rescued his body but respiration failed to revive him.

Two heat prostrations were reported yesterday in Minneapolis. Lynn H. Miller, sales manager of the Western Union, collapsed while enroute to the Golden Valley course where the Trans-Mississippi golf tournament was in progress. He died in St. Barnabas hospital.

Power lines in many sections of the northwest were affected by the storm. Lights were out in the Midway section of St. Paul and extra police patrolled the section. Power lines near Eau Claire, Wis., were out of commission for a while.

In northern Wisconsin, storms accompanied the heat wave. In several sections winds reached gale proportions and some damage was done.

In contrast to the heat in central United States, a blizzard was reported sweeping northern Canada. Forecasters predicted that relief eventually would come here because of that blizzard.

Phoenix had an official temperature of 104 and Amarillo of 102. Several midwest cities, including Mattoon, Ill., and Waterloo, Ia., claimed unofficial marks of over 100. The official maximum at St. Louis was 96; El Paso, 98; Milwaukee, 96; Evansville, Ind., 96; Kansas City, 92; Pueblo, 98; Detroit, 94; and Minneapolis, 94.

In most sections, the heat was welcomed by farmers, but some fears were expressed that if it continued much longer serious crop damage might be done.

Elk River, Minn., June 20.—A rain storm that felled trees and telephone poles in this vicinity caused an estimated $10,000 damage last night.

Barns and silos on the farms of Will Herick and Oscar North near here were damaged and several garages in the town were blown over. Many basements were flooded as the water ran down main streets and over the sidewalks.

Chicago, June 20.—Summer's first onslaught of oppressive heat, which took a high toll of life and drove hundreds of thousands to beaches and parks for relief, was retreating today from north central states before a series of cooling showers.

Temperatures close to normal were reported by the Chicago weather bureau to have been restored in Minnesota and Wisconsin. The heat wave apparently was beginning to break rapidly in Iowa and northern Illinois.

The spreading counter attack of showers was expected to advance well into the Ohio, middle Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys by tomorrow.

Around the Great Lakes veering winds indicated approaching relief, although a sort of showers in and around Chicago last night increased the humidity and made the city's millions uncomfortable in temperatures that lagged only slightly behind those of yesterday.

Instead of losing intensity along the Atlantic seaboard and in states below the Mason-Dixon line, the heavy heat that has overspread the great part of the country for nearly 48 hours probably will become more oppressive over the week-end, it was predicted.

New York, June 20.—The Metropolitan area sweltered beneath a burning sun today, with the weather bureau predicting the temperature will touch 90 degrees before nightfall.

Boston, June 20.—Seven deaths directly or indirectly attributable to the extreme heat had been reported in the New England states today.

Five deaths were attributed to the heat yesterday and more were expected today.

Two Fliers Burned to Death as Plane Crashes Power Wires

San Luis Obispo, Calif., June 20.—(U.P.)—Two unidentified fliers were burned to death near here today when their plane collided with high tension wires and crashed flaming to the ground. It was thought the craft was an army plane, but there was not enough of it remaining to identify it.

PREACHER SAYS HIS TALE OF ATTEMPTED HANGING IS A HOAX

REV. B. P. BROWN TRIED TO HANG HIMSELF IN TRYING TO COMMIT SUICIDE

LOST HIS NERVE AND THEN CONCOCTED THE LYNCHING STORY

Dallas, Texas, June 20.—(U.P.)—The story of how four men attempted to lynch a 30-year-old Baptist minister by hanging him from a chandelier directly over the pulpit where he stood each Sunday morning to preach his Gospel was a hoax, the preacher confessed today.

The Rev. P. B. Brown, supply pastor at the North Dallas Baptist church, hanged himself in the attempt to commit suicide, lost his nerve and then concocted the lynching story, he admitted. Mental disorders, brought on when he was slugged in the head early this year at Midland, Texas, were blamed for his action.

Brown was beaten by burglars when he discovered them rifling a safe at the hotel where he was working at the time. He then came to Dallas, entered the ministry and supported himself working as a baggage clerk in the Adolphus hotel.

Brown confessed his story was a hoax before his whole congregation, assembled for a revival meeting.

He told of his elaborate plans he made to hang himself. He looped the rope over the chandelier, placed the loop around his neck and climbed on a chair, he said. Then, he kicked the chair away and was suspended in mid-air, slowly choking to death.

Brown changed his mind, however, and finally freed himself from the knotted rope.

He was found by police stripped of his clothing and his mouth bound shut with strips of adhesive tape.

Huckepoehler they would "fix" a liquor charge against him for $2,500.

Corneaby and Conley were charged with having told Huckepoehler they could fix his liquor law violation case through the aid of Senator Thomas D. Schall and L. L. Drill, United States district attorney.

Tornado Twists in Path of Destruction From Mason City, Iowa to Twin Lakes, Minn.

SUCKING FUNNEL OF WIND ON HEEL OF HEAT

JOHN SMITH KILLED NEAR HAYFIELD, BODY CARRIED 50 FEET FROM HOME

LUTHERAN CHURCH DESTROYED, BARN BLOWN OVER AT TWIN LAKES, MINN.

Mason City, Iowa, June 20.—(U.P.)—A sucking funnel of wind generated on the heels of an early summer heat wave tore a path of death and destruction, starting in Iowa and extending into Minnesota.

John Smith was killed near Hayfield by the tornado. His body was carried 50 feet from the house in which he had sought shelter.

Sweeping northeastward from Hayfield, the twister tore down communication wires and killed livestock until it struck Twin Lakes, Minn., just north of the Iowa state line. A Lutheran church was destroyed, barns were blown over and several houses damaged by the wind.

Every telephone in the heart of the storm center was out of order and at some towns the telephone companies reported many wires and poles blown down.

Albert Lea, Minn., June 20.—A severe wind dand thunder storm did $100,000 property damage in Albert Lea and vicinity today.

Jens J. Bonnerup, Freeborn county coroner, said he had received no reports of casualties from the storm.

Several inches of rain flooded fields and basements, washing out trees and telephone poles. Telegraph and telephone communications was being restored and no additional reports of severe damage were received.

Sidewalks and pavements were torn up at Owatonna, west of here. At Watertown and Mankato, floods and uprooted trees were reported.

Every window in the village of Hartland, north of here, was blown out.

'BLOOD-CURDLING' SCREAMS NEAR FAITHFULL HOME

CAME FROM VICINITY ON THE DAY THAT STARR DISAPPEARED

FURNISH AUTHORITIES WITH ANOTHER ANGLE IN MYRIAD OF CLUES

By CARL D. GROAT (United Press Staff Correspondent) (Copyright, 1931, by United Press)

New York, June 20.—Evidence of "blood-curdling" screams emanating from the vicinity of the Faithfull home the day Starr Faithfull disappeared, furnished authorities with another angle today in the myriad of clues which have pointed to murder in the drowning of the beautiful Greenwich village girl.

Mrs. Allard Valentine, whose apartment is in the rear of the Faithfull home, separated only by a court, told District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards of Nassau county she heard "blood-curdling" screams—the most unearthly screams—in the rear of her home on June 5—the day Starr left home in apparently high spirits never to be seen alive again. Finding of her bruised and nearly nude body washed up on the sands of Long Beach, Long Island, three days later, led Edwards to declare she was the victim of foul play, despite other evidence which pointed to suicide.

Mrs. Valentine told of the screams yesterday while the Faithfull family and Inspector Harold R. King were away investigating a new angle in the mystery. They left headquarters after witnesses called before the grand jury were suddenly excused and King had announced he had unearthed a new clue which either gave authorities "a break in solution of the mystery, or put them right back where they had started from."

Faithfull, not so prosperous as in former days, has lost his position as salesman for a pneumatic mattress concern. Now he is less interested in worrying about making a living for the rest of his life than he is in solving the mystery of his step-daughter's death.

"After Starr's case is cleared up," he said, "there will be time to worry about ourselves."

He has a letter from his former employers, telling him the board of directors decided they would have to sever connections with him presumably because of the publicity connected with Starr's death.

Killed When He Tried to Stop Runaway Team

Milwaukee, Wis., June 20.—(U.P.)—William Haas, 58, was killed today while trying to stop a run-away team of horses.

GUN BATTLE AT A DRINKING PARTY IN PRIVATE GARAGE

DEPUTY SHERIFF IS SHOT AND KILLED AT LAKE GENEVA, WISCONSIN

HIS ASSAILANT, A NEIGHBOR, WAS CRITICALLY WOUNDED

Lake Geneva, Wis., June 20.—(U.P.)—A deputy sheriff was shot through the heart and killed and his assailant, a neighbor, was critically wounded today in a gun battle which developed at what authorities said was a drinking party in a private garage.

The shooting occurred in a garage owned by Walter Morgan, who was named as the slayer of Deputy A. G. Exner, and who himself was shot over the heart and so seriously wounded physicians said he could not recover.

Morgan was shot, witnesses said, by Deputy Sheriff Herbert Griebler who went with Exner to investigate the party.

Authorities were told that there previously had been trouble between Exner and Morgan.

Exner, who gained some fame last year when he captured the kidnaper of Betty Ann Foster of Valparaiso, Ind., was awakened early today by shots. He dressed and started toward Morgan's garage, nearby. On the way he met Deputy Griebler, who accompanied him.

Griebler said when he and Morgan entered the garage, five men were there, one standing in each corner and Morgan himself at the far side. Exner, he said, asked who had been doing the shooting.

At this, Griebler said, Morgan started across the garage, his hands in his pocket. Half way, Griebler said, Morgan stopped suddenly, drew a revolver and shot Exner through the heart. Griebler immediately shot down Morgan and arrested the other men, who did not resist.

The four are Charles Sabar, Will Morgan, William Morgan and R. Morgan, all of Lake Geneva. The last two, relatives of Walter Morgan, said they knew of no motive for the killing. Exner was 35 years old, married and the father of two children.

ENGINE TROUBLE AGAIN PLAGUES SUB NAUTILUS

SUB STOPS SINCE NOON, STARBOARD ENGINE, PORT MOTOR BADLY DAMAGED

Washington, June 20.—(U.P.)—Engine trouble is again plaguing the submarine Nautilus, in which Sir Hubert Wilkins is attempting to cross the Atlantic on the first leg of a proposed cruise to the North Pole.

The Nautilus was towed part way across by the battleship Wyoming after an earlier stage of motor trouble. Later her bridge and periscope were swept away by high seas. The Wyoming, still standing by the submarine 280 miles from Queenstown, Ireland, reported to the navy last night.

"Nautilus stopped since noon. Battened down, not communicating. Saving batteries. Trouble with fuel oil and air compressor. Starboard engine, port motor and periscope damaged beyond ship repair. Bridge gone. Crew working to start port engine. Sea rough."

RELIEF FOR JOBLESS IN COMING WINTER

The president's committee will act as co-ordinator for relief campaigns to be carried on by several national welfare and relief organizations, four of which already have been enlisted by the federal government.

SAVING IT FROM THE DANGERS OF POLITICAL TURMOIL

ADMINISTRATION IN MAJOR EFFORT TO HELP COUNTRY OUT OF ECONOMIC MIRE

GERMANY MAY BE INDIRECTLY AIDED BY READJUSTING BRITISH DEBT TO U. S.

By JOSEPH H. BAIRD (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, June 20.—The administration was engaged today in a major effort to help Germany out of the economic mire into which the world war dragged this country's former enemy.

President Hoover is seeking ways to save Germany from the dangers of bankruptcy and political turmoil, and at the same time to stimulate business at home by unlogging the channels of world trade. What he will do is not yet known definitely, but fundamental changes in the war's heritage of debts and reparations may result from a series of White House conferences that the president is holding.

As Mr. Hoover summoned administrative and congressional advisors to the White House again today, two possible courses of action were advanced by informed officials:

First, and apparently more important, Germany might be indirectly aided by a readjustment of the British debt to the United States. Britain long has said she would scale down German payments to her in proportion, as her own debts were reduced. It is understood that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, now in Europe, already has discussed this possible action with Prime Minister MacDonald and Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

Second, the federal reserve banks might establish a substantial credit here for Germany to tide the Reich over its present financial crisis.

President Hoover began his conferences on the economic situation yesterday, with his efforts "particularly directed to strengthening the situation in Germany." To his office came a succession of leading government officials and congressional leaders of both parties—Secretary of State Stimson, Undersecretary of the Treasury, Assistant Secretary of Commerce Klein, Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, and Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, among others.

At the close of the busy day, the president issued this statement: "Since my return from the central west yesterday (Thursday), I have conferred with these leaders of both political parties who are present in Washington with respect to certain steps which we might take to assist in economic recovery both here and abroad.

"These conversations have been particularly directed to strengthening the situation in Germany. No definite plans or conclusions have yet been arrived at, but the response which I have met from the leaders of both parties is most gratifying.

"Any statement of any plan or method is wholly speculative and is not warranted by the facts."

The White House handed out this short statement, subject to any one of a dozen interpretations—a new debt-reparations conference, a loan to Germany, tariff readjustments—and would say nothing more. Neither would Secretary of State Stimson, save to explain that the new administration move probably would not interfere with his trip to Europe late this month or early in July.

From one high quarter, it was learned that readjustment of Great Britain's debt was being given serious consideration.

More than half a decade ago, Lord Balfour said Great Britain would scale down its demand for German reparations in proportion as its debts were cut. Britain, he said in effect, wanted from Germany only enough to pay its own creditors.

Great Britain funded its debts to the United States earlier—and on less favorable terms—than any other European power. The final debt agreement called on Britain to pay $4,428,000,000 as compared with $3,865,000,000 from France. So high is the British interest rate that of its payments up to November 15, 1930, $1,017,360,000 went for interest and only $174,000,000 applied to reducing the debt.

Observers believe far less objection would be raised by cutting the interest rate, which might save Britain millions of dollars annually, than by lowering the principal itself.

Berlin, June 20.—After slight improvement through the middle of the week, the financial situation suddenly became worse today and the Reichsbank resorted to credit restriction.

An order was given that bank acceptances were not to be quoted on the Bourse today.

Withdrawal of foreign currency from the Reichsbank, after slumping to 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 marks Wednesday and Thursday, rose to 60,000,000 marks yesterday and today. It was accordingly feared that further drastic restriction of credit might be imminent.

It was semi-officially learned that this would result on a German declaration of a Young plan moratorium at the earliest possible date.

Proffered Aid to Germany Strengthens N. Y. Stock Market

By ELMER C. WALZER
United Press Financial Editor

New York, June 20.—Announcement that the government was considering plans which would strengthen Germany's economic position, brought favorable reaction in the financial district today and the stock market shot forward 1 to 17 points.

More than $2,000,000,000 was added to paper valuation of the trading stocks on a market that saw activity return after a week of lethargic trading. There were times the tickers could not keep pace with the trading, under pressure.

'BLOOD-CURDLING' SCREAMS NEAR FAITHFULL HOME

CAME FROM VICINITY ON THE DAY THAT STARR DISAPPEARED

FURNISH AUTHORITIES WITH ANOTHER ANGLE IN MYRIAD OF CLUES

By CARL D. GROAT
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1931, by United Press)

New York, June 20.—Evidence of "blood-curdling" screams emanating from the vicinity of the Faithfull home the day Starr Faithfull disappeared, furnished authorities with another angle today in the myriad of clues which have pointed to murder in the drowning of the beautiful Greenwich village girl.

Mrs. Allard Valentine, whose apartment is in the rear of the Faithfull home, separated only by a court, told District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards of Nassau county she heard "blood-curdling" screams — the most unearthly screams — in the rear of her home on June 5—the day Starr left home in apparently high spirits never to be seen alive again. Finding of her bruised and nearly nude body washed up on the sands of Long Beach, Long Island, three days later, led Edwards to declare she was the victim of foul play, despite other evidence which pointed to suicide.

Mrs. Valentine told of the screams yesterday while the Faithfull family and Inspector Harold R. King were away investigating a new angle in the mystery. They left headquarters after witnesses called before the grand jury were suddenly excused and King had announced he had unearthed a new clue which either give authorities "a break in solution of the mystery, or put them right back where they had started from."

Faithfull, not so prosperous as in former days, has lost his position as salesman for a pneumatic mattress concern. Now he is less interested in worrying about making a living for the rest of his life than he is in solving the mystery of his step-daughter's death.

"After Starr's case is cleared up," he said, "there will be time to worry about ourselves."

He has a letter from his former employers, telling him the board of directors decided they would have to sever connections with him presumably because of the publicity connected with Starr's death.

GUN BATTLE AT A DRINKING PARTY IN PRIVATE GARAGE

DEPUTY SHERIFF IS SHOT AND KILLED AT LAKE GENEVA, WISCONSIN

HIS ASSAILANT, A NEIGHBOR, WAS CRITICALLY WOUNDED

Lake Geneva, Wis., June 20.—(U.P.)—A deputy sheriff was shot through the heart and killed and his assailant, a neighbor, was critically wounded today in a gun battle which developed at what authorities said was a drinking party in a private garage.

The shooting occurred in a garage owned by Walter Morgan, who was named as the slayer of Deputy A. G. Exner, and who himself was shot over the heart and so seriously wounded physicians said he could not recover.

Morgan was shot, witnesses said, by Deputy Sheriff Herbert Griebler who went with Exner to investigate the party.

Authorities were told that there previously had been trouble between Exner and Morgan.

Exner, who gained some fame last year when he captured the kidnaper of Betty Ann Foster of Valparaiso, Ind., was awakened early today by shots. He dressed and started toward Morgan's garage, nearby. On the way he met Deputy Griebler, who accompanied him.

Griebler said when he and Morgan entered the garage, five men were there, one standing in each corner and Morgan himself at the far side. Exner, he said, asked who had been doing the shooting.

At this, Griebler said, Morgan started across the garage, his hands in his pocket. Half way, Griebler said, Morgan stopped suddenly, drew a revolver and shot Exner through the heart. Griebler immediately shot down Morgan and arrested the other men, who did not resist.

The four are Charles Saber, Will Morgan, William Morgan and R. Morgan, all of Lake Geneva. The last two, relatives of Walter Morgan, said they knew of no motive for the killing. Exner was 35 years old, married and the father of two children.

Washington, June 20.—(U.P.)—Engine trouble is again plaguing the submarine Nautilus, in which Sir Hubert Wilkins is attempting to cross the Atlantic on the first leg of a proposed cruise to the North Pole.

The Nautilus was towed part way across by the battleship Wyoming after an earlier siege of motor trouble. Later her bridge and periscope were swept away by high seas. The Wyoming, still standing by the submarine 280 miles from Queenstown, Ireland, reported to the navy last night.

"Nautilus stopped since noon. Battened down, not communicating. Saving batteries. Trouble with fuel oil and air compressor. Starboard engine, port motor and periscope damaged beyond ship repair. Bridge gone. Crew working to start port engine. Sea rough."

SAVING IT FROM THE DANGERS OF POLITICAL TURMOIL

ADMINISTRATION IN MAJOR EFFORT TO HELP COUNTRY OUT OF ECONOMIC MIRE

GERMANY MAY BE INDIRECTLY AIDED BY READJUSTING BRITISH DEBT TO U. S.

By JOSEPH H. BAIRD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, June 20.—The administration was engaged today in a major effort to help Germany out of the economic mire into which the world war dragged this country's former enemy.

President Hoover is seeking ways to save Germany from the dangers of bankruptcy and political turmoil, and at the same time to stimulate business at home by unblocking the channels of world trade. What he will do is not yet known definitely, but fundamental changes in the war's heritage of debts and reparations may result from a series of White House conferences that the president is holding.

As Mr. Hoover summoned administrative and congressional advisors to the White House again today, two possible courses of action were advanced by informed officials:

First, and apparently more important, Germany might be indirectly aided by a readjustment of the British debt to the United States. Britain long has said she would scale down German payments to her in proportion, as her own debts were reduced. It is understood that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, now in Europe, already has discussed this possible action with Prime Minister MacDonald and Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

Second, the federal reserve banks might establish a substantial credit here for Germany to tide the Reich over its present financial crisis.

President Hoover began his conferences on the economic situation yesterday, with his efforts "particularly directed to strengthening the situation in Germany." To his office came a succession of leading government officials and congressional leaders of both parties—Secretary of State Stimson, Undersecretary of the Treasury Mills, Assistant Secretary of Commerce Klein, Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, and Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, among others.

At the close of the busy day, the president issued this statement:

"Since my return from the central west yesterday (Thursday), I have conferred with these leaders of both political parties who are present in Washington with respect to certain steps which we might take to assist in economic recovery both here and abroad.

"These conversations have been particularly directed to strengthening the situation in Germany. No definite plans or conclusions have yet been arrived at, but the response which I have met from the leaders of both parties is most gratifying.

"Any statement of any plan or method is wholly speculative and is not warranted by the facts."

The White House handed out this short statement, subject to any one of a dozen interpretations—a new debt-reparations conference, a loan to Germany, tariff readjustments—and would say nothing more. Neither would Secretary of State Stimson, save to explain that the new administration move probably would not interfere with his trip to Europe late this month or early in July.

From one high quarter, it was learned that readjustment of Great Britain's debt was being given serious consideration.

More than half a decade ago, Lord Balfour said Great Britain would scale down its demand for German reparations in proportion as its debts were cut. Britain, he said in effect, wanted from Germany only enough to pay its own creditors.

Great Britain funded its debts to the United States earlier—and on less favorable terms—than any other European power. The final debt agreement called on Britain to pay $4,226,000,000 as compared with $3,865,000,000 from France. So high is the British interest rate that of its payments up to November 15, 1930, $1,017,360,000 went for interest and only $174,000,000 applied to reducing the debt.

Observers believe far less objection would be raised by cutting the interest rate, which might save Britain millions of dollars annually, than by lowering the principal itself.

Berlin, June 20.—After slight improvement through the middle of the week, the financial situation suddenly became worse today and the Reichsbank resorted to credit restriction.

An order was given that bank acceptances were not to be quoted on the Bourse today.

Withdrawal of foreign currency from the Reichsbank, after slumping to 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 marks Wednesday and Thursday, rose to 60,000,000 marks yesterday and today. It was accordingly feared that further drastic restriction of credit might be imminent.

It was semi-officially learned that this would result on a German declaration of a Young plan moratorium at the earliest possible date.

Gen. Walsh reported that applications were being checked and that warrants would be mailed out at the rate of approximately 100 a week until all claims have been met.

Legend of Shetland Knitters

A curious legend is connected with Shetland wool. Over three centuries ago a Spanish galleon was wrecked on the Shetland isles when the Spanish armada was routed. The sailors who escaped taught the natives to make dyes from roots they found on the islands, which resembled those which grew in Spain. Few people know that the lovely colors of a Shetland pullover are a memorial of the armada.

Superstitious Japanese

Japanese are much more "choosy" than Americans about their telephone numbers and are willing to pay real money to avoid a jinx by unlucky numbers. They often pay from $500 to $2,000 for numbers which they believe are the harbingers of good fortune. Eight is the favorite figure, with three, five and seven also popular.

CANADIAN CROSSES ENGLISH CHANNEL IN GLIDER PLANE

Calais, France, June 20.—(UP)—A Canadian, Librant Beardmore, 54, held the distinction today of being the first person to cross the English Channel in a motorless glider.

Beardmore landed yesterday at Saint Inglevert airfield near here. He undertook the flight because, he said, he wanted a British subject to be the first to cross the channel in a glider.

Beardmore departed from Lymph airfield near London at 4:20 P. M. and landed at 6:20 P. M. In starting, the glider was towed by an airplane to an altitude of 3,000 feet and cut loose. It continued alone, gradually losing altitude as it crossed the channel. The landing was made without difficulty.

Although a large prize is offered to the first man to make a round trip in a glider flight over the channel, Beardmore said he was not interested. He said he would return in his glider, but would be towed all the way by an airplane. He said he was satisfied to be the first to cross the channel in a glider.

CANADIAN CROSSES
ENGLISH CHANNEL
IN GLIDER PLANE

Calais, France, June 20.—(UP)—A Canadian, Liblant Beardmore, 54, held the distinction today of being the first person to cross the English Channel in a motorless glider.

Beardmore landed yesterday at Saint Ingelvert airdrome near here. He undertook the flight because, he said, he wanted a British subject to be the first to cross the channel in a glider.

Beardmore departed from Lymph airdrome near London at 4:20 P. M., and landed at 6:20 P. M. In starting the glider was towed by an airplane to an altitude of 3,000 feet and cut loose. It continued alone, gradually losing altitude as it crossed the channel. The landing was made without difficulty.

Although a large prize is offered to the first man to make a round trip in a glider flight over the channel, Beardmore said he was not interested. He said he would return in his glider, but would be towed all the way by an airplane. He said he was satisfied to be the first to cross the channel in a glider.

The fliers, who plan a non-stop flight over the Atlantic, missed the airport by about three miles on their first landing about 9:30 P. M. last evening, and when they came down were greeted by the youngster, Ray McMurray.

COUNTY SURVEYOR CAUGHT IN STORM

Louis Knudsen Reports Storm Tore Wires Down, Entangling Car; Phone Service Normal Again

Long distance telephone communication with the Twin Cities was returned to normal again by 11 A. M. today with all toll lines repaired after last night's storm that struck with intense fury near Elk River.

Braierd escaped the worst part of the storm, being visited by rain without any strong wind.

Louis Knudsen, county surveyor, was returning to Brainerd and was caught in the storm near Elk River.

"Telephone lines and poles kept falling. Some of the lines entangled in my car and it was some time after the storm that I was able to extricate the car and continue," he said.

Telling of dangers in driving through the storm, Mr. Knudsen related how he stopped his car, kept his motor running and raised all the windows. Hail stones pelted against the car but did not break any windows.

The hail was similar to that which struck Brainerd and northwest vicinity of the county Thursday night.

Five toll lines to Minneapolis and one to St. Paul were disrupted. All had been repaired today.

Lines went down in the storm also between Brainerd and the following points: Wadena, Staples, Aitkin, Bemidji and Duluth. Communication was restored to normal by noon today.

COUNTY SURVEYOR CAUGHT IN STORM

Louis Knudsen Reports Storm Tore Wires Down, Entangling Car; Phone Service Normal Again

Long distance telephone communication with the Twin Cities was returned to normal again by 11 A. M. today with all toll lines repaired after last night's storm that struck with intense fury near Elk River.

Brainerd escaped the worst part of the storm, being visited by rain without any strong wind.

Louis Knudsen, county surveyor, was returning to Brainerd and was caught in the storm near Elk River.

"Telephone lines and poles kept falling. Some of the lines entangled in my car and it was some time after the storm that I was able to extricate the car and continue," he said.

Telling of dangers in driving through the storm, Mr. Knudsen related how he stopped his car, kept his motor running and raised all the windows. Hail stones pelted against the car but did not break any windows.

The hail was similar to that which struck Brainerd and northwest vicinity of the county Thursday night.

Five toll lines to Minneapolis and one to St. Paul were disrupted. All had been repaired today.

Lines went down in the storm also between Brainerd and the following points: Wadena, Staples, Aitkin, Bemidji and Duluth. Communication was restored to normal by noon today.

Early American Railroad

The first railroad projected between Cincinnati and St. Louis was chartered in 1811, according to Carter's "When Railroads Were New," but actual construction was not begun. Sixteen years later the project was revived by a new company, the Ohio & Mississippi railroad. Preliminary surveys were begun November 1, 1848, the first section was opened from Cincinnati to Cochran April 2, 1854, and the road was completed in 1857.

Mary's Immortal Lamb

In her childhood Mrs. Mary Hughes, 90, of Llangollen, North Wales, had a pet lamb, says the Omaha World Herald. She took it to school one day contrary to the rule which forbade bringing pets into the classroom. To restore discipline the teacher kicked it out and probably gave Mary a spanking, although the record is a little hazy as to this point. There being good grass in the school yard the lamb hung around filling its little tummy until school let out, when Mary took it home again.

This was a comparatively commonplace occurrence. It probably parallels in one way or another the experience of thousands of school children, both before and after Mary's day. It not only parallels but apparently actually duplicates numerous such experiences. Mrs. Hughes is only one of the many Marys who "had a little lamb."

Since Mrs. Hughes is blind and suffers with chronic rheumatism we wouldn't want to deprive her of any of the pleasure she gets from reminiscence of her girlhood escapade. But we are constrained to classify her as the last of the famous Marys. We cannot, as patriotic Americans, let her get away with the idea that she was the original Mary of the famous nursery jingle.

According to our research the rhyme was not written by one Sarah Buell who was living at Mary's home at the time, but was written and published at least ten years before Mrs. Hughes was born by Mrs. Sarah Josepha Bell Hale, editor of the Boston Ladies' Magazine and later for forty years editor of Godey's Lady's Book, in its way quite as famous as Mary's little lamb.

It doesn't much matter, of course, who Mary was or who the author was. No question of copyright is involved. Those young enough to be attracted by the jingle don't know or care anything about authorship and those old enough to be interested in authorship have ceased to care much about the jingle. Still right's right and we believe in standing up for America.

How can "Mary's Little Lamb" be Welsh, when there isn't a single line of unpronounceable consonants in it?

Hope in Local Economics

HERE IN Minnesota the last state legislature saddled the taxpayer with the highest levy in state history, says the Mankato Free Press.

The state has added materially to the tax problem, certainly has eased and relieved it not at all. Such economies as are to be effected, therefore, rest with school boards, county commissioners and city councils. They are facing a very real and important responsibility. It behooves every interested citizen to make them realize that fact.

Here in Brainerd it would be most advantageous to have a Chamber of Commerce committee study local taxation problems. Similar committees of the Rotary and Lions and other civic clubs may well consider the problem. The time to gauge taxes is at the source, before the budget is made up.

Driving at Good Speed

HIGHWAY patrolmen should insist that drivers on paved highways should drive at not less than thirty miles an hour, in the opinion of the Long Prairie Leader, which argues that there are many drivers who deliberately loiter on the highway, holding up traffic until a long string of cars is lined up behind. Then begins the dodging in and out to get by, and the accidents occur.

If people wish to try out their new cars at 20 miles an hour speed, or if they wish to dawdle along at even less speed than that, they should take to the sideroads and leave the trunk highways open for through traffic that wants to speed along at the legal high speed.

Michigan Avenue, Chicago, keeps its travel going at high speed and no loitering is ever permitted.

The Announcer Slipped

It was out at the lake and the family, assembled near the radio, were on their toes packing up for an early start for town.

And then the announcer said cheerily: "It is now a quarter after eight o'clock." There followed a hurried comparison of watches and alarm clocks, all indicating 7:15 a. m. Visions of being late for work, of reprimands, etc., followed. Just before leaving Mr. Announcer with his announcement on time, now corrected to state: "It is now 20 minutes after 7 o'clock."

Probably some substitute had to fill in before the "big boys" arrived, for he followed with a phonograph record entitled, "Bringing in the Sheaves."

Storm Damage Not So Severe at Brainerd

THE heat wave and storm damage of the past two days has not been very severe at Brainerd and in Brainerd territory. But one heat prostration was recorded, that occurring on Monday.

There have been no drownings, no serious accidents, no traffic mishaps. Losses by hail have not been severe. Some rye, barley and oats was affected.

TRAFFIC is increasing on the highways. Thursday evening, while a long freight train worked its way west, cars accumulated until by actual count there were 14 cars north of the Northern Pacific track in West Brainerd and 45 cars, some in double line, extending south of the crossing and to the approach of the Mississippi river bridge.

NATIONS thrive as their means of transportation quickly and safely are upheld. Rome was at its glory peak when its broad, straight highways stretched to every part of the far flung empire and were kept open and in constant use.

STAGNANT water in Lake Zumbro near Rochester is believed to have caused the death of thousands of fish. The shores are lined with dead fish, mostly crappies.

CABBAGE planted at lake gardens has to run the gauntlet of the rabbits who just dote on eating the plants.

MASS production depends on mass consumption in order to be successful.

MOSQUITO bite lotions are in demand at some of the lake homes.

Dave Ordway, wealthy, young aviator, lands his disabled plane in a Florida orange grove owned by Joan Marbury. Joan and her cousin, Sally, alone on the plantation, have great difficulty in running the place, due to the interference of Mueller, their disreputable neighbor. When Dave refuses Mueller's demand of $2,000 for the damage to his property, crashing through the trees to his landing on the Marbury plantation, Mueller holds him up and threatens him of $25,000, threatening to collect more. That night Mueller sets fire to Dave's plane. Rushing to the scene, Dave encounters Mueller. A quarrel ensues.

CHAPTER VII.

THERE were three men there where a moment before there had been but two. The third, a broad-shouldered, thick-necked Italian, was bending over the pair, who still writhed upon the ground. He reached down, seized one of the fighters, and dragged him to his feet. It was Dave, who twisted and struggled furiously to get back to Mueller. The Italian's arms slipped from the flyer's collar, encompassed his body in a bear hug and held him pinioned helplessly.

Mueller staggered to his feet, swayed for a moment, turned to face his opponent and grinned wolfishly. Then, with deliberate savagery, he stepped forward and smashed his fist again and again into the pilot's face. Dave's knees buckled at the first blow but the Italian held him upright and defenseless. He made another effort to twist out of the other's iron grip, but with Mueller's second carefully aimed punch, his head fell forward on his chest and he would have fallen had it not been for the man who was holding him upright. The shocking blows continued. Dave's head rocking back and forth with each impact. Joan dashed out of the darkness, the gun's barrel pointing straight at Mueller's chest. The Italian saw her coming and dropped his gorilla-like arms. Dave plunged forward on his face and lay motionless. Mueller stepped toward him and, with the full strength of his muscular body, drove his right foot against the unconscious man's ribs.

Just In Time

"Stop it!" screamed Joan shrilly. "Stop it or I'll shoot!"

Mueller, whose foot was already drawn back for another kick, whirled around to face her. "Go away from here," she stormed, "or I'll kill you both!"

In her frenzy she aimed the twin-barrels straight at Mueller's face. Her fingers trembled on the triggers. Suddenly it came to her that she wished to shoot. And Mueller read it in her eyes. The malignant savagery was suddenly smoothed out of his face. He looked regretful, mildly apologetic. "All right, girlie," he said. "Don't shoot. I'll beat it."

The tension within her snapped. She sobbed convulsively, looking at the two waiting men through a blinding screen of tears. But the gun did not waver. Mueller stood there a moment, watching her. Then, with a shrug, he turned away. The Italian followed him silently into the outer darkness.

In A Daze

Sally had not moved since the start of the fight. Her black eyes were round and staring, her face colorless. As Mueller and the Italian disappeared, she looked down at Dave as if she had never seen him before. Then she gazed at her cousin as if she, too, were a total stranger.

"Come on, Sally," said Joan, weakly, "we've got to get him home."

The dark-haired girl shuddered and seemed about to refuse. Then, with a visible effort, she walked over to where the flyer lay unconscious. Together they dragged clothes right away. You girls have done a wonderful job of sewing these things of mine, but you'll have to admit that even Hannah didn't think any of her gentlemen friends would care for them when I got a new outfit. I still maintain that you've sewed a trouser leg where the left sleeve ought to be!"

"We did no such thing!" laughed Sally. "But if you're not satisfied, we have a couple of pairs of extra overalls you may use, or perhaps we can borrow one of Hannah's clean Mother Hubbards."

"I may take you up," retorted Dave. "Gerry's not as reliable as he should be. In a day of so he'll probably open my letter, scurry around, buy all the clothes he can find in St. Petersburg and then send them to me with a letter full of east-iron alibis. And when I get back to St. Pete to beat him him, slowly, clumsily, through the grove.

Three evenings later, following the first dinner Dave had been able to take downstairs, he sat with Sally and Joan on the wide verandah, glorying in the soft, fragrant breezes of the tropic night.

"No packages for me at the cross-roads store?" he asked lazily.

"No," replied Joan. "The boy waited until the afternoon bus from Tampa had gone through. The new commutator came from the Ford agency, but there was nothing for you."

"Guess Gerry must be out on the Restless again," he murmured. "Or maybe he's been too busy rushing around doing nothing. I should have been more urgent in my letter, but I didn't like to get him all stirred up."

"Didn't you tell him you'd been hurt?" asked Sally.

"Well, not exactly," confessed Dave. "I just told him I'd been just a wee bit bruised. The only thing I laid any stress on was the fact that I had to have some up, he'll be half way to Jamaica, or somewhere, on his yacht so I can't reach him."

Peace And Contentment

He fell silent, bewitched by the glamorous peace of the sweet-scented night. What did it matter, anyway, whether Gerry sent his things today or tomorrow or the next day? Time stood still here. Since the tidal wave of the boom had receded, this place was again in the back country, where the tired old house could drowse away the days and nights considering the glories that had passed with its youth.

A palm tree stilled its dry leaves. A hunting dog bayed in the distance. The moon, unbelievably large and close, was lifting its sharp red rim over a clump of kumquats across the road, vignetting the treetops in outlines of black against copper. Vague, sense-stirring odors filled the air, adding their bit to the aching beauty of the tropic evening. There was magic here.

Mary's Immortal Lamb

In her childhood Mrs. Mary Hughes, 90, of Llangollen, North Wales, had a pet lamb, says the Omaha World Herald. She took it to school one day contrary to the rule which forbade bringing pets into the classroom. To restore discipline the teacher kicked it out and probably gave Mary a spanking, although the record is a little hazy as to this point. There being good grass in the school yard the lamb hung around filling its little tummy until school let out, when Mary took it home again.

This was a comparatively commonplace occurrence. It probably parallels in one way or another the experience of thousands of school children, both before and after Mary's day. It not only parallels but apparently actually duplicates numerous such experiences. Mrs. Hughes is only one of the many Marys who "had a little lamb."

Since Mrs. Hughes is blind and suffers with chronic rheumatism we wouldn't want to deprive her of any of the pleasure she gets from reminiscence of her girlhood escapade. But we are constrained to classify her as the last of the famous Marys. We cannot, as patriotic Americans, let her get away with the idea that she was the original Mary of the famous nursery jingle.

According to our research the rhyme was not written by one Sarah Buell who was living at Mary's home at the time, but was written and published at least ten years before Mrs. Hughes was born by Mrs. Sarah Josepha Bell Hale, editor of the Boston Ladies' Magazine and later for forty years editor of Godey's Lady's Book, in its way quite as famous as Mary's little lamb.

It doesn't much matter, of course, who Mary was or who the author was. No question of copyright is involved. Those young enough to be attracted by the jingle don't know or care anything about authorship and those old enough to be interested in authorship have ceased to care much about the jingle. Still right's right and we believe in standing up for America.

How can "Mary's Little Lamb" be Welsh, when there isn't a single line of unpronounceable consonants in it?

Hope in Local Economics

HERE in Minnesota the last state legislature saddled the taxpayer with the highest levy in state history, says the Mankato Free Press.

The state has added materially to the tax problem, certainly has eased and relieved it not at all. Such economies as are to be effected, therefore, rest with school boards, county commissioners and city councils. They are facing a very real and important responsibility. It behooves every interested citizen to make them realize that fact.

Here in Brainerd it would be most advantageous to have a Chamber of Commerce committee study local taxation problems. Similar committees of the Rotary and Lions and other civic clubs may well consider the problem. The time to gauge taxes is at the source, before the budget is made up.

Driving at Good Speed

HIGHWAY patrolmen should insist that drivers on paved highways should drive at not less than thirty miles an hour, in the opinion of the Long Prairie Leader, which argues that there are many drivers who deliberately loiter on the highway, holding up traffic until a long string of cars is lined up behind. Then begins the dodging in and out to get by, and the accidents occur.

If people wish to try out their new cars at 20 miles an hour speed, or if they wish to dawdle along at even less speed than that, they should take to the sideroads and leave the trunk highways open for through traffic that wants to speed along at the legal high speed.

Michigan Avenue, Chicago, keeps its travel going at high speed and no loitering is ever permitted.

The Announcer Slipped

It was out at the lake and the family, assembled near the radio, were on their toes packing up for an early start for town.

And then the announcer said cheerily: "It is now a quarter after eight o'clock." There followed a hurried comparison of watches and alarm clocks, all indicating 7:15 a. m. Visions of being late for work, of reprimands, etc., followed. Just before leaving Mr. Announcer with his announcement on time, now corrected to state: "It is now 20 minutes after 7 o'clock."

Probably some substitute had to fill in before the "big boys" arrived, for he followed with a phonograph record entitled, "Bringing in the Sheaves."

Storm Damage Not So Severe at Brainerd

THE heat wave and storm damage of the past two days has not been very severe at Brainerd and in Brainerd territory. But one heat prostration was recorded, that occurring on Monday.

There have been no drownings, no serious accidents, no traffic mishaps. Losses by hail have not been severe. Some rye, barley and oats was affected.

TRAFFIC is increasing on the highways. Thursday evening, while a long freight train worked its way west, cars accumulated until by actual count there were 14 cars north of the Northern Pacific track in West Brainerd and 45 cars, some in double line, extending south of the crossing and to the approach of the Mississippi river bridge.

NATIONS thrive as their means of transportation quickly and safely are upheld. Rome was at its glory peak when its broad, straight highways stretched to every part of the far flung empire and were kept open and in constant use.

STAGNANT water in Lake Zumbro near Rochester is believed to have caused the death of thousands of fish. The shores are lined with dead fish, mostly crappies.

CABBAGE planted at lake gardens has to run the gauntlet of the rabbits who just dote on eating the plants.

MASS production depends on mass consumption in order to be successful.

MOSQUITO bite lotions are in demand at some of the lake homes.

Dave Orday, wealthy, young aviator, lands his disabled plane in a Florida orange grove owned by Joan Marbury. Joan and her cousin, Sally, alone on the plantation, have great difficulty in running the place, due to the interference of Mueller, their disreputable neighbor. When Dave refuses Mueller's demand of $2,000 for the damage to his property, crashing through the trees to his landing on the Marbury plantation, Mueller holds him up and relieves him of $350, threatening to collect more. That night Mueller sets fire to Dave's plane. Rushing to the scene, Dave encounters Mueller. A quarrel ensues.

CHAPTER VII.

THERE were three men there where a moment before there had been but two. The third, a broad-shouldered, thick-necked Italian, was bending over the pair, who still writhed upon the ground. He reached down, seized one of the fighters, and dragged him to his feet. It was Dave, who twisted and struggled furiously to get back to Mueller. The Italian's arms slipped from the flyer's collar, encompassed his body in a bear hug and held him pinioned helplessly.

Mueller staggered to his feet, swayed for a moment, turned to face his opponent and grinned wolfishly. Then, with deliberate savagery, he stepped forward and smashed his fist again and again into the pilot's face. Dave's knees buckled at the first blow but the Italian held him upright and defenseless. He made another effort to twist out of the other's iron grip, but with Mueller's second carefully aimed punch, his head fell forward on his chest and he would have fallen had it not been for the man who was holding him upright. The shocking blows continued, Dave's head rocking back and forth with each impact.

Joan dashed out of the darkness, the gun's barrel pointing straight at Mueller's chest. The Italian saw her coming and dropped his gorilla-like arms. Dave plunged forward on his face and lay motionless. Mueller stopped toward him and, with the full strength of his muscular body, drove his right foot against the unconscious man's ribs.

Just In Time

"Stop it!" screamed Joan shrilly. "Stop it or I'll shoot!"

Mueller, whose foot was already drawn back for another kick, whirled around to face her.

"Go away from here, she stormed, "or I'll kill you both!"

In her frenzy she aimed the twin-barrels straight at Mueller's face. Her fingers trembled on the triggers. Suddenly it came to her that she wished to shoot. And Mueller read it in her eyes. The malignant savagery was suddenly smoothed out of his face. He looked regretful, mildly apologetic.

"All right, girlie," he said. "Don't shoot. I'll beat it."

The tension within her snapped. She sobbed convulsively, looking at the two waiting men through a blinding screen of tears. But the gun did not waver. Mueller stood there a moment, watching her. Then, with a shrug, he turned away. The Italian followed him silently into the outer darkness.

In A Daze

Sally had not moved since the start of the fight. Her black eyes were round and staring, her face colorless. As Mueller and the Italian disappeared, she looked down at Dave as if she had never seen him before. Then she gazed at her cousin as if she, too, were a total stranger.

Co-Operation Basis of

All Success in World

If there were more co-operation in the world, there would be less fiction. No home life, no business, no nation can succeed without co-operation. Confusion and wastage of time and energy must naturally result. Look around at all the successful men today, and then look at the business concerns they direct. In every case you will find that co-operation is the corner stone of their success. They have been shrewd enough to realize that only failure would have resulted had they neglected co-operation.

And do not think that co-operation means only co-operation on the part of one section of the business, the home, or the nation. The worker and the owner; the head of the house and the kitchenmaid; the prime minister and the people—everyone must do his bit at co-operating.

There can be no happiness, no content of any kind, if co-operation is missing. We should have fewer broken lives, less unemployed, and no wars if co-operation were given a reasonable chance.—London Tit-Bits.

By HILLIER KRIEGHEAUM
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Minneapolis, Minn., June 20.—Two golfers with plenty of experience back of them—Johnny Goodman, Omaha, and Lester Bolstad, St. Paul—today battled for the Trans-Mississippi championship.

Four years ago, Goodman hitchhiked to Colorado Springs, borrowed a set of clubs and won the Trans-Mississippi title. It was his first bid for fame. Two years ago he defeated Bobby Jones in the National Amateur tournament and became a world wide golfing figure.

Bolstad, one year out of college, won the Big Ten championship two years ago and has played in the National Public Links and National Open tournaments.

Goodman went into the final contest when he defeated Fred Dold, Wichita, 11 up on the 26th hole. Goodman took an early lead when he won the first three holes. At the end of the morning round of 18 holes he was 7 up. During the afternoon, his lead mounted until he won.

Bolstad had more difficulty disposing of Dr. Paul Barton, Davenport, the Iowa amateur champion. Dr. Barton earlier in the matched play put out Robert McCrary, Des Moines, defending champion. Bolstad won from Dr. Barton, 3 and 2. At the end of the first nine holes, the pair was even but Bolstad gained two up at the end of 18.

D. N. Tallman, Willmar, Minn., only two-time holder of the senior title, will play Arthur D. Hays, Minneapolis, in the finals of that flight. Tallman eliminated S. O. Abrams, president of the Golden Valley Club where the contest is being held, 2 and 1. Hays won from Warde Smith, Minneapolis, 1 up.

BALL TEAMS ASK BETTER GROUNDS

CLOSE TO 200 ATHLETES USING BALL GROUNDS HOPE FOR BETTER FACILITIES

One of the principal reasons why baseball in Brainerd is not as popular with the public as it should be is inadequate grounds.

With this thought in mind 12 baseball teams in Brainerd today planned a move to either secure new grounds or improve the present diamond at the N. P. field near the fill. The latter appears to be the solution this year.

Representatives of the teams will appear before the city council at an early meeting to ask the co-operation of the city in such an improvement.

The 12 baseball teams in Brainerd play in three divisions. In the city league are the Northeast, Southeast, V. M. C. A. and South Side. Three junior teams also play, N. E. Boosters, S. E. Pirates, Peterson Clothiers and there is the independent group of the Laurel Lunch, Select Dry Cleaners, Lyons Grocery and the Iron Welders of the N. P. Shops. Besides these the team representing the city exists.

In addition there are five men's diamondball teams, Thompson Oils, Penney's, Byes, Beverages, Wards and four ladies' diamondball teams.

Thus, close to 200 athletes of the diamond are interested in better playing grounds.

Navy Crew Upsetting Regatta Dope

Much to the surprise of the thousands of spectators who lined the banks of the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie, and completely upsetting all the advance dope, the Navy varsity shell is shown poking its nose across the finish line to beat the highly touted Cornell crew, which finished second, and the Washington Huskies, who took third place in the annual intercollegiate regatta. Syracuse, California, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Wisconsin and M. I. T. finished in the order named.

THOUGH he received a boxing lesson from the masterly Tommy Loughran in New York City a month ago, Vittorio Campolo, Argentine giant, battled so gallantly that some think he might have worn out the far lighter Philadelphia had the bout been for more than ten rounds. It was the eighth straight victory for Loughran since his come-back after being knocked out by Jack Sharkey in 1929. It stamped Tommy as again a leading contender for the world's championship. Furthermore, it definitely revealed Campolo as a courageous, fairly fast, powerful slugger.

Though ordinarily a fight between two foreigners would not be much of a moneymaker, it's certain that one between Campolo and Carnera might even outdraw the Schmeling-Stribling show. Camp is about an inch taller than the 6-foot-6 Primo but the latter would outweigh him by about thirty pounds. The "Battle of the High C's" would promise a fiercely fought mauling match with plenty of bouncing off the boards by one or both of these fiery tempered Italians. Alps vs. Andes in Man Mountain Melee—what an amusing clash that ought to be!

With the Schmeling-Stribling title bout set for Cleveland, July 3; Loughran maneuvering for a return shot at Sharkey; Mickey Walker also angling for a crack at Jack; Campolo not passing too much time in his training camp rocking chair; and Carnera, always in the spotlight, the heavyweights seem to be perking up. And there's a fair crop of comers in the field—Steve Hamas, former Penn State football and basketball star; Charley Retzlaff, of Leonard, N. D., and Stanley Poreda, of Jersey City—all pounding at doors leading to the big time. The 192-pound Hamas, with 15 knockouts and two wins in 17 starts, looks very good. Retzlaff has stopped the aged Tom Heeney and Jack Gagnon, and outpointed Johnny Risko. Poreda has been punching his way to the fore in the metropolitan area. The 1931-32 campaign should determine whether or not any or all three will really make heavyweight history.

Washington, June 20.—(U.P.)—Second installment income tax returns reduced the deficit further today to $908,103,047, the treasury department announced. Total receipts tabulated on June 18 were $47,819,906, representing the best day's receipts since second installment payments began.

World Has Changed Little
The profiteer, the dealer in short weights, the food adulterer seem to have been with us always, and in the days when the pillory was most commonly used its tenants were generally such evildoers.

A Champion Shows You How

Pretty Eleanor Holm, youthful New York girl, who holds the national backstroke and 300-yard medley swimming championships and is aiming for more laurels, is presented to you here in the manner in which she outclasses her competitors. Center picture illustrates how beautifully Eleanor dives at the start of a victorious race. Top, left, is a close-up of the aquatic star. Insert, lower right, shows her demonstrating the crawl, the best in her free-style bag of strokes. Lower photo depicts the reliable breast stroke. All pictures were taken at Rye, N. Y., where Eleanor is practicing to defend her titles at the forthcoming National A. A. U. championship meet.

BALL TEAMS ASK BETTER GROUNDS

CLOSE TO 200 ATHLETES USING BALL GROUNDS HOPE FOR BETTER FACILITIES

One of the principal reasons why baseball in Brainerd is not as popular with the public as it should be is inadequate grounds.

With this thought in mind 12 baseball teams in Brainerd today planned a move to either secure new grounds or improve the present diamond at the N. P. field near the fill. The latter appears to be the solution this year.

Representatives of the teams will appear before the city council at an early meeting to ask the co-operation of the city in such an improvement.

The 12 baseball teams in Brainerd play in three divisions. In the city league are the Northeast, Southeast, Y. M. C. A. and South Side. Three junior teams also play, N. E. Boosters, S. E. Pirates, Peterson Clothiers and there is the independent group of the Laurel Lunch, Select Dry Cleaners, Lyons Grocery and the Iron Welders of the N. P. Shops. Besides these the team representing the city exists.

In addition there are five men's diamondball teams, Thompson Oils, Penneys, Byes, Beverages, Wards and four ladies' diamondball teams. Thus, close to 200 athletes of the diamond are interested in better playing grounds.

FALLS PLAYS DOUBLE-HEADER

Heavies Perking Up

By HARDIN BURNLEY

Navy Crew Upsetting Regatta Dope

Much to the surprise of the thousands of spectators who lined the banks of the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie, and completely upsetting all the advance dope, the Navy varsity shell is shown poking its nose across the finish line to beat the highly touted Cornell crew, which finished second, and the Washington Huskies, who took third place in the annual intercollegiate regatta. Syracuse, California, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Wisconsin and M. I. T. finished in the order named.

THOUGH he received a boxing lesson from the masterly Tommy Loughran in New York City a month ago, Vittorio Campolo, Argentine giant, battled so gallantly that some think he might have worn out the far lighter Philadelphia had the bout been for more than ten rounds. It was the eighth straight victory for Loughran since his come-back after being knocked out by Jack Sharkey in 1929. It stamped Tommy as again a leading contender for the world's championship. Furthermore, it definitely revealed Campolo as a courageous, fairly fast, powerful slugger.

Though ordinarily a fight between two foreigners would not be much of a moneymaker, it's certain that one between Campolo and Carnera might even outdraw the Schmeling-Stribling show. Camp is about an inch taller than the 6-foot-6 Primo but the latter would outweigh him by about thirty pounds. The "Battle of the High C's" would promise a fiercely fought mauling match with plenty of bouncing off the boards by one or both of these fiery tempered Italians. Alps vs. Andes in Man Mountain Melee—what an amusing clash that ought to be!

With the Schmeling-Stribling title bout set for Cleveland, July 3; Loughran maneuvering for a return shot at Sharkey; Mickey Walker also angling for a crack at Jack; Campolo not passing too much time in his training camp rocking chair; and Carnera, always in the spotlight, the heavyweights seem to be perking up. And there's a fair crop of comers in the field—Steve Hamas, former Penn State football and basketball star; Charley Retzlaff, of Leonard, N. D., and Stanley Poreda, of Jersey City—all pounding at doors leading to the big time. The 192-pound Hamas, with 15 knockouts and two wins in 17 starts, looks very good. Retzlaff has stopped the aged Tom Heeney and Jack Gagnon, and outpointed Johnny Risko. Poreda has been punching his way to the fore in the metropolitan area. The 1931-32 campaign should determine whether or not any or all three will really make heavyweight history.

No Lack of Distinguished Company

There was no lack of distinguished personalities when Princeton University, at Princeton, N. J., held its annual commencement exercises and awarded honorary degrees. For the first time in the history of the school, a woman, Willa Cather, the author, was given a degree of Doctor of Letters. Left to right are Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State; John Greer Hibben, president of Princeton; Willa Cather and Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War. Mr. Kellogg and Mr. Baker were accorded honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws, while Lindy was honored with a degree of Master of Science.

Nice Mother, Nice Daughter

Maybe you didn't know it but Irene Rich, film actress, has a grownup daughter who is just about as nice looking as her famous mother. This interesting picture was taken at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., when Frances, the daughter, was graduated. Proud mother, Irene, journeyed all the way from California to attend the commencement exercises.

Movable Dates

Because the early Egyptian calendar allowed exactly 365 days to a year, a festival observed on a fixed date would occur a day earlier every four years, until in the course of 1,460 years it had been observed at every season and was back at the starting point.

How Much Should A Funeral Cost?

WE BELIEVE that the funeral should reflect accurately the standard of living of the deceased. To fall below this standard is not good taste. To spend more is mistaken sentimentality.

Whatever the needs of each particular case, the high standards of our service are always maintained.

No Lack of Distinguished Company

There was no lack of distinguished personalities its annual commencement exercises and awarded honorary degrees. For the first time in the history of the school, a woman, Willa Cather, the author, was given a degree of Doctor of Letters. Left to right are Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State; John Greer Hibhad been observed at every season

WCCO PLAYERS TO PRESENT COMEDY

Veterans of Foreign Wars Sponsor Entertainment at High School Saturday, June 27

Radio personalities will desert the microphone and the sound-proofed studio to make a personal appearance on the stage when the WCCO Players present a modern three-act comedy and incidental entertainment at the high school auditorium Saturday evening, June 27, under auspices of the Mahlum-Hanson post No. 1647, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

It will be the first time since radio first made its bid for public favor that so large a group of radio stars have gone on tour in this part of the country. Included in the group are such well known personalities as Joe Ainley, director of dramatic production at WCCO, Al Sheehan, announcer, who will act as master of ceremonies,

Jerry Harrington, tenor and dialect comedian, Florence Muzey and Maurine Piper, the "Keyboard Kittens," Geraldine Lager, who has played stock in eastern theatres, Arieth Halberie of the WCCO Home Town Dramas, Bob Jellison, radio sound technician.

All members of the WCCO Players have had professional theatrical experience, both in stock and on the road. They have been attracted to the radio studio by the public demand for radio dramas. What they have been doing in the radio studio they will demonstrate to Brainerd residents June 27.

In the same manner that radio entertainment proceeds without interruption, the program of the WCCO Players will continue without break for two hours. With Al Sheehan as master of ceremonies, to introduce members of the cast, and create laughter in his own inimitable manner, there will be entertainment between scenes that will eliminate the usual fretful breaks, songs, etc.

The comedy to be presented is "Nothing But The Truth," by James Montgomery, a rollicking farce concerning the trials and tribulations of a young stock broker, Bob Bennett, who, on a wager with friends, agrees to tell nothing but the truth for 24 hours. How important apart innocent prevarication has in everyday life is humorously demonstrated by the difficulties and trials he goes through to win a bet of $10,000. Forced to tell the truth, Bennett reveals everything under the persistent questioning of his friends who try to keep him from winning his bet.

Tickets have been placed on sale at Service News, H. P. Dunn, druggist, E. J. Sedlock, jewelry, Levis Soda Grill.

This didn't happen in Brainerd but it pertains to a Brainerd man.

Norman Viken, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Viken, Brainerd, recently was transferred from Worcester Mass., to Chicago for the Wheeler Studios. He had heard and read considerably about gun play in Chicago but thought little about it.

The first night he was in Chicago he attended a theatre and on leaving the building witnessed a policeman chasing a bandit down the street. The cop winged "his man" in the shoulder, dropping him on the street where he arrested him.

Norman writes that his roommate had told him that he had lived in Chicago all his life and had not seen any gangsters or gun fights.

SUMMARIZES VIEW OF FILIPINOS

Rev. Ford, Baptist Missionary to Philippine Islands Tells of Conditions There

Rev. Fred R. Ford, Baptist missionary to the Philippine Islands, who is a summer guest at Parkerville, gave Rotarians an enlightening talk on conditions in the islands, stressing the reasons for the Filipino's desire for complete autonomy at an early date.

By way of introduction he quoted the prophecy of Secretary Seward, made more than seventy-five years ago that "the Pacific Ocean, its islands and bordering continents, would be the stage on which the great drama of world history will be enacted in the twentieth century." Seward's prediction, at first ignored is receiving homage now as European affairs become increasingly entangled and slumbering Asia opens its eyes.

Thoughtful men predict that the three great world powers of a half century hence will be the United States, China and Russia, all possessing men and materials, the requisites for industrialization, and all bordering the Pacific.

Mr. Ford summed up briefly the achievements of the American government in the Philippines, our country having set itself seriously to prepare the islands for independent nationhood. Religious freedom, general education, industrial development, peace and order, almost complete self-government are outstanding among the achievements of the islands under American protection and guidance.

The islands, having begun the struggle for independence under the old Spanish regime, now seek the fulfillment of a national aspiration for freedom which has been fostered by American idealism during more than 30 years of American administration. The Filipino, Mr. Ford said, urges three major considerations in his claim for independence, as follows:

First: The national aspiration for complete political autonomy with which liberty-loving Americans are bound to sympathize whatever their particular "slant" on the independence question in the Philippines.

Second: The Filipino urges that his national resources are being developed as an integral part of the economic system of the United States. He instances the investment of American capital in the Philippines and the reception of Philippine products duty free, into the United States. This is founding Philippine industry and agriculture on an insecure basis as sugar and vegetable oil interests in the United States are demanding that tariff barriers be raised against Philippine goods, even if independence is necessary in order to do so.

Third: The Filipino asks for complete autonomy on the ground he is of a different race from that of the present ruling power and that racial difference raises a barrier to under-

The Broad Highway

Not so many years ago a shopping expedition was a task calling for the expenditure of a great deal of time and energy. Roads were poor, particularly in the country. And, after having toiled to the market places, the shopper had to use unusual discrimination to be sure of getting the things that best suited the family's needs.

All that is changed. Paved roads in city and country make transportation swift, safe and easy. And advertising is like one of those highways, leading straight to the mark, permitting speedy, economical buying. Giving information. Enabling choices to be made at home. Reducing shopping to the easy selection of brands of known quality. Eliminating buying puzzlement and doubts. Saving you minutes and hours for other things—amusements, reading, culture, family duties. Reducing wear and tear on mind and body and money.

It pays to travel this new, modern road . . . this broad highway paved with printers' ink. Read the advertisements.

Advertising is the highway to better buying

He instances the investment of American capital in the Philippines and the reception of Philippine products duty free, into the United States. This is founding Philippine industry and agriculture on an insecure basis as sugar and vegetable oil interests in the United States are demanding that tariff barriers be raised against Philippine goods, even if independence is necessary in order to do so.

Third: The Filipino asks for complete autonomy on the ground he is of a different race from that of the present ruling power and that racial difference raises a barrier to understanding and cooperation, in spite of the altruistic policy that America has followed in the Philippines. The Filipino shares the feeling of most of the Orient against the Occident, which, it is urged, has more often than not exploited the Orient for the benefit of the Occident.

In conclusion Mr. Ford urged that Americans make a thoughtful study of this question because our participation in Oriental affairs has such tremendous possibilities for good or evil; that conclusion regarding the disposition of the islands be reached on the basis of right and not in consideration of either American industries demanding protection or of American capital interests seeking investment fields outside the United States.

The Broad Highway

Not so many years ago a shopping expedition was a task calling for the expenditure of a great deal of time and energy. Roads were poor, particularly in the country. And, after having toiled to the market places, the shopper had to use unusual discrimination to be sure of getting the things that best suited the family's needs.

All that is changed. Paved roads in city and country make transportation swift, safe and easy. And advertising is like one of those highways, leading straight to the mark, permitting speedy, economical buying. Giving information. Enabling choices to be made at home. Reducing shopping to the easy selection of brands of known quality. Eliminating buying puzzlement and doubts. Saving you minutes and hours for other things—amusements, reading, culture, family duties. Reducing wear and tear on mind and body and money.

It pays to travel this new, modern road... this broad highway paved with printers' ink. Read the advertisements.

Advertising is the highway to better buying

Happy Moon Legends

Na-quil.
Many suns and moons and snows ago there was born to Na-quil, god of the sky, and his wife, a son.

Now Na-quil, who had all the storms, rain and snow to attend to, as well as the thunder and lightning, was very busy. But just the same he sat down on the edge of a cloud and tried to think of the best gift, he could give his son.

Because he lived in the sky, Na-quil was very fond of blue. And Na-quil remembered that once he had seen a blue stone exactly the color of the sky.

So Na-quil pounded on the edge of the cloud and Kee Yay, his helper, came running.

"Blue beads are the finest things in the world," said Na-quil. "My son shall have many blue beads. I'd better fly down and ask Ools Kah Stee where those stones are."

"Here are your wings," and Kee Yay handed him the claws, beak and wings of a golden eagle. The wings are seven feet from tip to tip and Kee Yay can hardly lift them.

"While you are flying, are you going by that valley over there? It is only a thousand miles, and they need rain badly," said Kee Yay.

"No, I'm in a hurry to get the beads," said Na-quil. "Ools Kah Stee goes to bed with the sun. I must hurry."

"But, the Great Valley needs rain badly," said Kee Yay.

"I'll send them some," promised Na-quil.

Na-quil had put on all of his eagle suit except one wing. He had not put his arm into the right wing yet, so with his free hand he gathered up a cloud and rolled it into a ball. Then he threw the ball a thousand miles into the valley. The ball hit against a hill on the other side of the Great Valley. Then they had rain in the Great Valley, and Na-quil flew down to visit Ools Kah Stee.

Ools Kah Stee is a great snake. He lives down in the earth and he is king of the Under-ground. His name means "Fearless," but when he saw Na-quil flying toward him he moved near his hole.

"Good flying to you," said Ools Kah Stee.

"The same—I mean, I wish you good weather," said Na-quil.

"The weather could be better," replied Ools Kah Stee, looking over toward the Great Valley. "But can I do something for you?"

"Yes, I am going to give my son a string of blue beads to wear when he is older. Will you give me some of your sky-stones?"

"If you will stop the storm that is flooding the Great Valley you can have all you wish."

"I'll stop the storm," said Na-quil. "Good-by."

Na-quil dipped his wings in the waters and then shook out his feathers and the water dried up.

Na-quil had dried up most of the waters when he came to a waterfall high up in the mountain.

This was the very place where the storm ball had struck and it had knocked down a little tree. The tree lay across the stream and the rocks held it so it could not get away.

It was a brave little tree and though the river pounded it and threw rocks and branches at it and bent it, the little tree would not break. Every time it was bent it sprang back straight.

Its bark was cut and its branches broken, but it sang a song to the angry river.

"This tiny tree fights better than any large one I ever saw," said Na-quil. "Even though it is torn from its roots and is soon to die, it sings."

Through the cut bark Na-quil could see the white heart of the tree.

"What a strong heart," he said. "It will be a better gift for my son than many blue beads. I shall give it to him."

So Na-quil stopped the river and picked up the little tree. He flew to the mountain where he had left his wife and his little brown son. He hurried into the house. The baby winked and blinked at Na-quil, and once when the baby's eyes winked shut, Na-quil caused the strong heart of the tree to enter and live in his son.

When other people heard of this they named the boy Strong Heart.

Comforts Retired "It" Girl

Temporarily retired from motion pictures after a career that lasted seven years, Clara Bow, the famous "IT" girl, has forsaken the bright lights of Hollywood for the peaceful seclusion of a cattle ranch. She doesn't want anything to remind her of Klieg lights, bawling directors or whirling cameras in her new environment and her titian locks have now reverted to the shade that gentlemen prefer. Miss Bow is shown above in an affectionate pose with her friend Rex Bell, the owner of the ranch where she is recuperating.

HOOVER OPENS LINCOLN SHRINE

Photo shows President Hoover delivering the principal address at the dedication of the remodeled tomb of Abraham Lincoln in Springfield, Ill. The President's address at the tomb was primarily a tribute to the Great Emancipator, but he took occasion to refer to law enforcement, saying that no man is bigger than the law of his country.

This was the very place where the storm ball had struck and it had knocked down a little tree. The tree lay across the stream and the rocks held it so it could not get away.

It was a brave little tree and though the river pounded it and threw rocks and branches at it and bent it, the little tree would not break. Every time it was bent it sprang back straight.

Its bark was cut and its branches broken, but it sang a song to the angry river.

"This tiny tree fights better than any large one I ever saw," said Na-quil. "Even though it is torn from its roots and is soon to die, it sings."

Through the cut bark Na-quil could see the white heart of the tree.

"What a strong heart," he said. "It will be a better gift for my son than many blue beads. I shall give it to him."

So Na-quil stopped the river and picked up the little tree. He flew to the mountain where he had left his wife and his little brown son. He hurried into the house. The baby winked and blinked at Na-quil, and once when the baby's eyes winked shut, Na-quil caused the strong heart of the tree to enter and live in his son. When other people heard of this, they named the boy Strong Heart.

Comforts Retired "It" Girl

Temporarily retired from motion pictures after a career that lasted seven years, Clara Bow, the famous "IT" girl, has forsaken the bright lights of Hollywood for the peaceful seclusion of a cattle ranch. She doesn't want anything to remind her of Klieg lights, bawling directors or whirling cameras in her new environment and her titian locks have now reverted to the shade that gentlemen prefer. Miss Bow is shown above in an affectionate pose with her friend Rex Bell, the owner of the ranch where she is recuperating.

HOOVER OPENS LINCOLN SHRINE

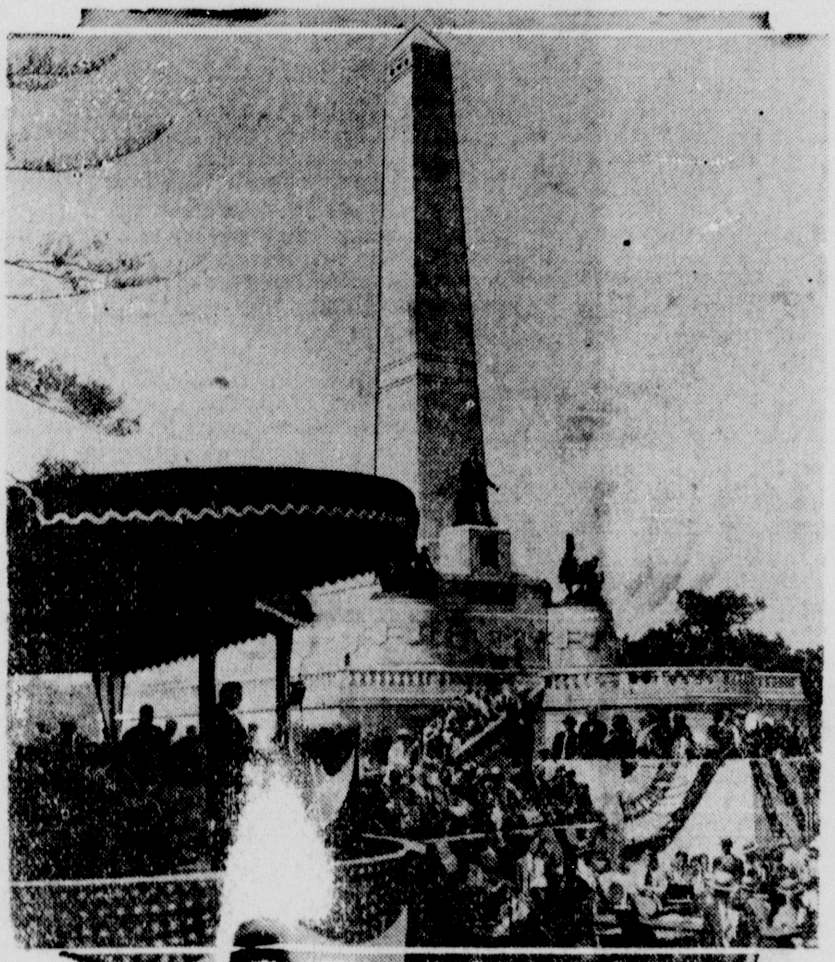

Photo shows President Hoover delivering the principal address at the dedication of the remodeled tomb of Abraham Lincoln in Springfield, Ill. The President's address at the tomb was primarily a tribute to the Great Emancipator, but he took occasion to refer to law enforcement, saying that no man is bigger than the law of his country.

WINTER FUN

How jolly is the winter. When snow comes falling down, And covers all the grass and flowers of the town. I put on my thick overcoat, My mitts and muffs warm, My rubber boots too, And go out in the storm. And out beside our back yard I build a fine snow fort. With a lot of coats and a carrot for a nose, His old tin can. With dad's old hat upon his head. Old dad on his jolly smile upon his face. I'm sure he's hard to beat!

Let's Make Some Gifts

This will be a fine present for mother, for it will keep all her sewing things clean and ready for use.

Take a cigar box or any small wooden box with a cover. Use a wet cloth to rub off any paper that is on the box. Then stain or paint the box a pretty green or some color which is not too light. Make little places for spoons, thimble, pins, buttons and other small things by putting thin strips of wood across the inside of the box to form small squares. You can nail the wood in with tiny brads. If you cannot get thin pieces from some old cover or box, use heavy pasteboard and fit it tightly into place. Perhaps as a little decoration you can paint mother's initials in gold or any bright color on the cover. This will be useful for Dad to have, either at home or in his office. Use two blocks of wood. One block must be shaped like a wedge so it will slip under the door and hold it back. Nail the other block to one end of this so it is standing upright. If you use a jig saw you can cut this upright block into a fancy shape by rounding the corners or doing a bit of carving. Paint both blocks a pretty color.

A Sewing Box and a Door Stop.
